

MIRIAM BERKLEY

“For those who haven’t read it yet, you must!

This book is full of magic and wisdom,
fearlessly written by a scholar of both history and the human heart. It’s brilliant, bold, and generous at once, much like the author herself.
Brava, Lesley!!” —Kim Ponders, author of The Last Blue Mile and panelist for the AROHO 2007
Literary Gift of Freedom for Fiction

Lesley Hazleton is known for her mold-breaking blend of in-depth research and historical imagination. British-born, Lesley lived for thirteen years in Jerusalem, where she worked simultaneously as a psychologist and as a reporter for Time-Life. A member of the AROHO retreat faculty in summer 2007, she helped the participants exceed their own writing expectations. Her last book was Mary: A Flesh-and-Blood Biography of the Virgin Mother.
